Monsignor H. Jules Roos
1930-2013

His work among the poor of Chimbote, Peru was “a Mission that became a home” for Monsignor H. Jules Roos, Bishop Zubik said of the local priest’s 48 year commitment to the poorest of people in the South American country.

With Father Jim Shanahan and other priests, Monsignor Roos began a Social Works Center. An outpatient clinic existed but by 1966 Father Roos, dismayed by the many emergency baptisms he was performing for babies dying after being born in unhealthy conditions, opened a maternity hospital.

Today, the Social Works Center, the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese’s mission in Chimbote, operates the 26-bed maternity hospital, a clinic, lab and programs in education and specialty care, reaching some 17,000 patients and delivering some 300 babies each month.

Monsignor and his Mission Partners formed a bridge between Pittsburgh and Chimbote. He “never-ever wavered in his conviction that the church should bring to even the poorest people the spiritual and physical and medical support they need,” said Cardinal Donald Wuerl of Washington, DC, former Bishop of Pittsburgh.
